Chairman's Message to Members

Each election cycle marks a time for us to begin again with both promise and potential. I believe this because we do many things well, that we will continue to do many things well, and continue to make a significant impact on our future. Even the great explorers understood - that just because a destination is not in sight doesn't mean it does not exist.

Over the years our experience with certain city statements continually show us that we are not likely to believe something just because it's what we are asked to believe, and we find it difficult when someone has fudged the facts or stretched the truth. And the falsity that we detect is that they want us pretending that something is there when nothing is there. That is why we need a process that would enable voters to focus on the candidate's abilities and potential without being distracted and subconsciously biased by irrelevant factors such as tenure in office.

I have observed that our community has become more caring with the realization that we must all work together to support one another.

Not just now, today, but to continue well into the future as we have struggled against the forces that have betrayed us. It is time this year of 2018 to have new forums, like ours, that will bring the community together to find creative solutions to our problems and challenges of which we have many.

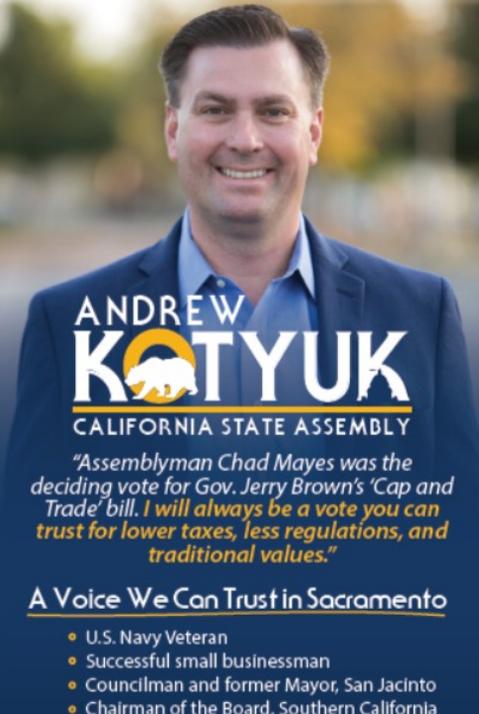

There are, though, many signs of our greatness, including our future of collective responsibility but we should not stand on our laurels alone. How a community cares for those less fortunate, as well as its institutions of art, culture, education, and service, is a sign of its concern. Sometimes helping a single life is like saving the entire city and we should never separate ourselves from the community. A great city is concerned with the total welfare of its citizens and embraces a culture of community service. Such a city is destined for greatness.

But we cannot achieve greatness alone. It is also dependent on choosing the right leaders who will give of their time toward improving life for all. We need leaders that bring a new spirit of responsibility and that is what makes good cities into great cities. See you all on March 22nd.

Thank you,
Robert Sylk
